Tamper-Evident Records

Every entry carries a unique digital fingerprint, called a hash, calculated by Parentlog's servers from the entry's exact content at the moment of submission. This fingerprint is printed at the bottom of each entry throughout this document. Because fingerprints are set by Parentlog's servers rather than by either parent, they provide mathematically verifiable proof of the record's authenticity. To verify a specific entry, enter its 64-character fingerprint at parentlog.app/verify to retrieve the original, unaltered text and timestamp directly from our secure servers.

Independently Verifiable

When this document was generated, Parentlog permanently recorded the date of export, the number of entries, the date range covered, and a cryptographic fingerprint of the complete document. The Record Code above is the unique identifier for this specific export event. Entering it at parentlog.app/verify allows any third party, including legal professionals, courts, or mediators, to independently confirm when this document was generated and how many entries it should contain, ensuring pages have not been added or removed.

Permanent Timestamps

Every record in this document carries a timestamp set by Parentlog's servers at the moment of submission, not by either parent. Neither party can adjust when an entry appears to have been recorded, and no entry can be submitted with a backdated or future-dated timestamp. Shared records confirmed in Parentlog are permanent: the timestamp, the content, and the digital fingerprint are locked together from the moment of creation, giving this document a level of reliability that ordinary notes, screenshots, or messaging apps cannot provide.

Parentlog certifies that this document is an unaltered, chronological export of records submitted through the application. Parentlog does not independently verify the factual accuracy of user-supplied content and images.

Had a great afternoon at the local park. Olivia played well with other children and seemed in a good mood.
